Fostering active citizenship and entrepreneurship among young migrant women through Community Gardens

Growing Beyond the Project: SUCCSEEDS Final Conference in Liège

On 25 September 2026, the SUCCSEEDS project celebrated its Final Conference in Liège, hosted by Le Monde des Possibles. The room was full, bringing together participants interested in exploring how community gardens, green entrepreneurship and inclusive education can create new opportunities for young migrant women.

The conference marked the beginning of the closing phase of the SUCCSEEDS project, but not the end of its journey. Over the course of the project, partners have developed knowledge, tools and experiences designed to support social inclusion and active citizenship. Like seeds planted in fertile ground, these results can continue to grow through the work of youth workers, community educators and local communities long after the project itself comes to an end.

Learning, Sharing and Looking Beyond Borders

The conference was enriched by two interactive workshops, offering participants the opportunity to discover new perspectives and connect project themes with real-life experiences.

The first workshop explored how mobility can inspire innovation and encourage participants to discover practices in other contexts, take inspiration from them and bring new ideas back home. As part of this session, Siri (the representative of the Norwegian partner of the project) presented MiA and shared how this initiative works in Norway to support the integration of people, demonstrating how experiences and approaches from different contexts can inspire new solutions at local level.

The second workshop focused on Community Gardens as socio-cultural spaces for inclusion, active citizenship and entrepreneurship. Participants explored the different ways gardens can become places where people meet, learn, participate, develop skills and create opportunities. The discussion was enriched by personal experiences from the community, highlighting the value of connecting project methodologies with lived realities and local initiatives.

SUCCSEEDS Results: Resources to Keep Growing

Although the project is entering its closing phase, its results remain available for anyone interested in continuing this work. The SUCCSEEDS website provides free access to the main project resources, developed to support youth workers and community educators in working with young migrant women.

Fostering active citizenship and entrepreneurship among young migrant women through Community Gardens

Digital Platform and Online Learning Programme
An open learning environment designed for youth workers and community educators, providing knowledge and learning materials to strengthen their competences and support their daily work with young migrant women.

Collection of Hands-on Exercises
A practical set of activities and educational tools that can be used by youth workers and community educators when working directly with young migrant women, helping transform learning into action in real-world educational and community settings.

All these resources are available in English, French, Spanish and Norwegian, making them accessible to a wide range of professionals and organisations wishing to adapt and use the SUCCSEEDS approach in their own contexts.

The Seeds Have Been Planted

The final conference was not simply a moment to look back. It was an opportunity to celebrate what has been achieved, exchange experiences and think about what can grow next.

The SUCCSEEDS project may be reaching its formal conclusion, but the knowledge shared, connections created and tools developed can continue to inspire action in communities across Europe.

The project is closing. The seeds are still growing.
